Wow, what a difference a week makes. Last week we set a record with 24 species and this week we came up with only 16.

We were expecting 19.5. It was hot, so probably that had something to do with it.

The most interesting sighting was a pair of Red-masked Parakeets mating.

I've never seen that before. So, even on a bad day, there is often something interesting. The biggest shock was seeing no Ravens. They were 100% probable.

Better luck to us next week.
