Walk lasted between 12:00 and 13:55.

So, no record today but we were right on the predicted number, which was 17.8 species. The Oak Titmouse was the highlight bird, but most of us missed it. Viveca reported it as seen on her way back to her car. That counts! The fledgling Cooper's Hawks are out of the nest but sitting nearby. I suspect we won't see them next week, as they will probably have learned to fly by then.
